

TYPES AT THE URINAL

FRIVOLOUS MAN—Plays the stream up, down and across the urinal. Attempts to hit flies. This type never grows up.

DISGRUNTLED MAN—Stands for awhile waiting, then gives up. Walks out of washroom mumbling to himself.

SNEAKY MAN—Farts silently while leaking. Acts innocent, knows man in adjoining booth will get blamed.

PERSONALITY MAN—Tells dirty jokes while leaking. Has practiced control of farts. Has comrade in stitches.

SLOPPY MAN—Telltale wet drop is always below fly. Never misses his shoes. Usually walks out with his fly open.

METHODICAL MAN—Uses same urinal consistently and the same number of steps for the approach. Is as dexterous with the button fly as the common man is with the Zipper.

CHILDISH MAN—Leaks directly in pool in bottom of urinal. Likes the bubbling noise it makes.

(Over)

PATIENT MAN—Stands for an incredible length of time waiting. Sometimes reads newspaper with free hand.

EXCITABLE MAN—Shorts have twisted around. Cannot find hole. Rips pants in rage.

SOCIABLE MAN—Joins friends in a piss whether he has to or not. Figures it doesn't cost anything.

CROSS EYED MAN—Looks into urinal at left. Leaks into one at right. Flushes one in the middle.

TIMID MAN—Cannot urinate if anyone is looking. Flushes urinal, pretending he has leaked. Sneaks back later.

NOSEY MAN—Attempts to see how the fellow in the next urinal is fixed.

INDIFFERENT MAN—All urinals being occupied, leaks in the sink.

CLEVER MAN—No hands. Shows off by adjusting neck tie. Looks for admiring glances.

WORRIED MAN—Isn't sure what he has been in recently. Makes frenzied inspection.

ABSENT MINDED MAN—Opens vest, takes out necktie, then pisses pants.

OPTIMISTIC OLD MAN—Needs only one button, but opens three—hoping.
